ACADEMIC CALENDAR

The academic year structure

The academic year in the UK runs from September to June. Traditionally the year is split into three terms: Autumn (September–December), Spring (January–March/April) and Summer (April–June). The University of Nottingham teaching system, however, runs on a semester basis:

Autumn Semester (Semester 1) Mid-September – Mid-January

Spring Semester (Semester 2) Mid-January – Mid-June

But the term dates are still used to show the holiday periods of Christmas (December/January) and Easter (March/April).

Holidays

Students have four weeks' holiday at Christmas (early December to early January) and four weeks holiday at Easter (March/April depending on when Easter Sunday falls). There are also two national holidays in May (called Bank Holidays) when the University closes.

Semester dates

Our semester dates are available online at www.nottingham.ac.uk/about/studying/dates.php

Examinations

Autumn Semester examinations take place in mid January.

Spring Semester examinations take place in late May.

Students are expected to be in Nottingham for the examination periods.

TEACHING AND LEARNING

Studying at Nottingham

- A flexible approach to teaching combines traditional lectures and tutorials with interactive, practical and web-based methods.
- A taste of the 'real world' is provided in many Schools through presentations and lectures from visiting speakers from industry.
- Facilities from lecture theatres to laboratories are continually modernised and upgraded to provide the very best in up-to-date teaching facilities.
- Students take 60 Nottingham credits per semester or 120 credits for the academic year.
- Modules are available in 10 or 20 credit modules and study abroad and exchange students are able to take a combination of modules from a number of different Schools.
- The online Module Catalogue offers students detailed information on each module, including the number of credits, the method of assessment and the weighting, a summary of content, the name of the module convenor and the offering School. Please see <http://winster.nottingham.ac.uk/modulecatalogue/>

Academic Culture in the UK

- Independent Study is an integral part of the UK's academic culture.
- It is very likely that you will have fewer contact hours than in your home institution.
- Some Nottingham students may well find that they would spend a third of their time in taught lectures and seminars and two thirds researching and studying unsupervised.
- Students are encouraged to debate ideas with lecturers and individual thinking is rewarded.

Independent study is intended to:

- Help you develop skills such as critical analysis and problem solving.
- Develop your research skills (finding relevant books and articles).
- Allow you to investigate a topic in more detail and develop your own ideas.

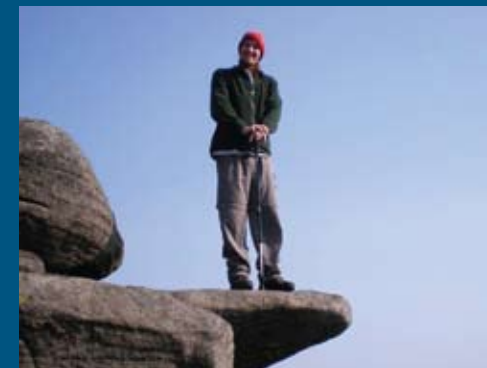

Examinations and assessment

- Assessment procedures vary considerably across different Schools.
- Some modules are assessed wholly via formal examination at the end of the semester.
- Many modules are assessed by coursework, either in the form of a traditional essay, or via projects, case studies, assessed labwork and assessed presentations.
- Continuous assessment is not the norm.

Academic Support

There is a well-established support structure in place to assist Study Abroad and Exchange students as they adapt to studying at the University of Nottingham:

- Study Abroad/Exchange Coordinator – each School has a designated member of staff to advise Study Abroad and Exchange students when choosing modules and academic queries.
- Module convenor – if you have a specific query regarding a module that you are studying, it's best to speak to the module convenor (the lecturer who teaches the module) in the first instance.
- Student Services Centre – the Student Services Centre provides a personal and practical approach to academic study and opportunities for students to develop their study skills. It also provides specialist academic support for both dyslexic students and disabled students. Please see www.nottingham.ac.uk/ssc/ for further information.
- Centre for English Language Education (CELE) – if English is not your first language CELE run an insessional programme of once-weekly classes of writing, speaking, listening and reading skills, which are neither credit-bearing nor assessed and are taught during lunchtimes. CELE also offer one to one assistance with any queries relating to language and study skills. Please see www.cele.nottingham.ac.uk/ for further information.
- International Office – although the International Office do not offer direct academic support, we are more than happy to liaise with academic Schools and members of staff on your behalf or put you in touch with the right person who will be able to assist you.

THE CENTRE FOR ENGLISH LANGUAGE EDUCATION

There are two routes into the Study Abroad Programme. A direct entry into academic Schools for native English language speakers and a Pre-Sessional English Language Course prior to the period of academic study for students for who English is not their first language.

Pre-sessional English language courses

For those whose first language is not English our Centre for English Language Education (CELE) offer a range of English Language Programmes for students to improve their English ability before their academic programme begins.

Non-native English speakers who have already met our entry requirements can also benefit from the four week pre-sessional English language course run by CELE. This will help them become accustomed to listening and speaking in English on a daily basis with the added advantage of having more time to settle in and meet fellow students.

Courses range from a minimum of one month to a maximum of nine months, depending on the particular language needs of individual students. The courses focus on developing academic language ability and study skills so that international students can meet the English language standard required for their chosen course of academic study. Please see below for further details on course entry requirements.

<http://www.cele.nottingham.ac.uk/>
